ITRC is a state-led national coalition dedicated to achieving better environmental protection through the use of innovative technologies. The tools and strategies that ITRC creates are helping regulatory agencies and technology developers, vendors, and users reduce the technical and regulatory barriers to the deployment of new environmental technologies. By working together and sharing knowledge among themselves and with federal, industrial, academic, and other stakeholder partners, ITRC states' products and services are building the collective confidence of the environmental community about using new technologies. The benefits ITRC offers state regulators, technology developers and vendors, technology users, and stakeholders will be discussed during this presentation.
